Statistics on Housing with Care in England

(and accompanying Guide to Housing with Care in England)

There are no universally recognised and precise definitions of the several forms of 'housing with care', or of what the key differences are between these and more traditional forms of retirement housing.

For the purpose of generating these statistics (and accompanying Guide) we have taken a very broad definition, and included:

- All developments described by their provider as extra care, close care, assisted living, continuing care or similar, and where this is not clearly a mistake or fraudulent; and
- Any other schemes that seem to us at EAC to offer some or all of the features which current debate suggests make them candidates for the 'extra care' label.

Despite a great deal of research and checking, we do not claim that EAC's database is totally complete, and it is inevitable that these statistics may slightly underestimate current extra care provision.

A specific point to note concerns housing schemes that share a site with a care home. Where we have confirmation that care services are made available from the care home to the housing residents (often described as a 'close care' arrangement), we have included the housing. However in over 100 settings where the nature of the link between care home and housing is unknown or doubtful, we have excluded it pending further investigation.

Statistics

By these criteria, we have identified 1,049 schemes built or under construction in England, providing a total of around 44,432 dwellings.

A note on tenure

A number of schemes offer more than one tenure option. In these cases, our statistics at present count all properties in a scheme according to its dominant tenure.
